(Photo by Daniel Boczarski/Getty Images) (CNSNews.com) – While Republicans hold majorities in nearly every congressional chamber, the top Democrat is the most senior member of the Senate. The Senate Minority Leader is, of course, the current Democratic leader of the Senate, Chuck Schumer. The top Democrat in the House is Nancy Pelosi. And in the House, the Democratic Leader is the most powerful person in the House. In both the Senate and the House, the Democrats are the minority party. That, of course, means they are also in the minority in the White House, where President Trump has the vast majority of the power. So, with the Democrats winning the House back in November, what happens when Schumer becomes the Leader of the Senate? Would not that make Schumer the most senior member of the House and therefore the second most senior member of the administration? This could not happen because Senate rules prohibit an individual from being both Majority Leader and Minority Leader at the same time. With Democrats taking control of the House and Republicans retaining control of the Senate, how could this situation arise? As far as the House is concerned, the rules can change. In fact, the current House rules simply require that if the House is evenly divided between the two parties in the House, the Speaker of the House automatically becomes the Republican leader. On top of this, there is nothing in the rules of the House preventing a Democrat from also becoming majority leader. So, theoretically, Pelosi could take over as majority leader and Schumer could then be the minority leader. But that is not how the Senate is run, as the Senate has a majority leader and a minority leader. And it was always designed to be run as such. Thus, that would not happen. Would a situation occur in which Schumer is the Senate Minority Leader, the Democratic Leader in the House and the Senate Minority Leader? After all, in a political system with a minority party, the minority party does not have any kind of formal power in the House. Therefore, it makes sense that the position of Senate minority leader would remain in the hands of the minority leader in the Senate. If a Democratic minority leader, Schumer, became the majority leader in the Senate, then he would be the largest and senior member of the House, making him the second senior senator.

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop CC 2015 Version 16?

In the end, I'm not really sure what made me finally have to finish this beast so it was time for him to finally lay with his brother (to, as you can see, great and wondrous delight of Teddy and Garfield). The front end of this is done with the standard square white cardstock you used for backdrops in this series. Even though the image used here is a little bigger, the process doesn't differ very much, so I'll focus on the stuff that did change. The front is a white box, with the words "The Fun Starts Here" written on it in block lettering. Over that is a 6x12 mat that I used to cut the image out of. I then filled it with a white/creamy colored styrofoam cup, which you could leave clear and open the styrofoam pot, or blow up into a solid form of foam that can be used as an alternative to foam core if you wanted to. Next, I made a frame for the front of this with a pair of 6x6 frame squares that I punched out to give it a little shadow around the edges. Again, this could be clear and open, or filled with foam/styrofoam. The frame around the outside left edge was cut out of foam, which for those not into scrapbooking, is exactly what I mean. As you can see on the right side in the photos, I used a stand to hold it up. In this frame I used a 6x6 felt cardstock frame template, glued into place. The back consists of a 6x12 mat of white cardstock. I used this to piece together a door for the back. I cut the door out of white cardstock, then painted it with the same brown that I used on the backdrop for the front. The door hinges are pieces of white cardstock with a dot on them, and the doorknob was also cut from the same cardstock. As for the door, for the opening I wanted to make sure to make the round edge with the mat, so I used the "border" around the mat as a guide. From this point on it was pretty simple. I just traced around the opening in the mat, and then cut it out with a craft knife and straightedge. I made sure to do this before I put in the door. You could also use foam board or styrofoam sheets to do this.
