Autodesk has been accused of using deceptive practices, like false advertising, to promote its products, but in September 2018, an Australian court ruled that Autodesk is guilty of false advertising because it has changed the price of certain products to Australian customers. Subsidiaries In March 2005, Autodesk spun off its former Alias Technology Group into a new company, Alias|Wavefront. Wavefront has since become the third largest 3D graphics application developer in the world. In 2008, Autodesk acquired Insight Software, an Additive Manufacturing company, and in 2013, Autodesk re-acquired Alias. Autodesk
