Jane Doe (1939 film) Jane Doe is a 1939 American film directed by Richard Wallace and starring Eduard Annen and Noah Beery. The film was made by Republic Pictures and was based on the original play Jane Doe written by Joseph Rodgers and Edward Sheldon. Plot Two sisters, Nora and Emma, are in love with two brothers, Albert and Ray. They are all from poor backgrounds and are looking forward to a better life after all three have finished with high school. Their hoped-for better life is limited to working in a large department store owned by the same family. Albert and Emma are enjoying their job because of their parents who feel proud of their children working at a store. Ray and Nora are not doing so well, having no parent to fall back on and also suffering from the machinations of a scheming boss and his ersatz sister. The movie tries to show the complexities of the human heart in trying to work through the problems of poverty and the expectations of family. Cast Noah Beery as Albert Nancy Carroll as Nora Eduard Annen as Ray Otto Hoffman as Mr. Hargrave Ruth Stone as Mrs. Hargrave Lillian Brandt as Aunt Sallie E. E. Clive as Uncle Adam Roy Brooks as Mr. Hargrave Jr. Don McElligott as Mr. Hargrave Adele Jergens as Miss Cecily Production Republic Pictures announced in January 1939 that they would produce a movie based on a play titled "Jane Doe". It was directed by Richard Wallace who had made several other films for Republic Pictures. The film was based on a play by Joseph Rodgers and Edward Sheldon. The production had very little overhead because it was being made outside of California and the studio itself only had to pay actors $125 a week for a week of work. Reception Writing for AllMovie, John J. Geoghegan gives the film a rating of "BOMB", calling it "marginally above average" and "entertaining if not particularly sophisticated".
