Anna. 9 Sep "Ever since I was a little girl, I always had an aversion to blood. They say I'm not the same anymore. I don't blame them. The only thing that stops me from becoming that person is you." When Lena's husband Bill is killed in a horrific car accident, he leaves behind his grieving widow and six-year-old son, Tommy. Lena decides to take Tommy to their country home, where she hopes to calm her fears. But before Lena can deal with her grief, she begins to believe that blood is rising again, and she is about to become the next victim. "As the sun sets, the houses around me grow dark. I walk to the police station, but the only things waiting for me there are more questions. I turn to the blood bank for help, but all the staff say that my blood is good, that their tests have been clean. I turn to my church, but they're all talking about who will take over in the wake of this crisis. I turn to a priest of a rival religion, and he seems sympathetic, but he's far away, and it's already after dark by the time he arrives. Eventually I have to turn to the one person I know I can trust. And it's too late, because the blood has already started to rise again." Indulge in this edition of The Butterfly's Kiss... Letters to the Doctor: Introducing Michelle, New Girl is here!. (Drama) C: 566 MiB..
