More than 100 data-scientists, engineers and researchers from The Lab, Blizzard, 22 Affiliates and other partners around the world worked on the technology, and The Lab's Patryk 'Elken' Grzelakowski said he and his team were responsible for "expanding the technology to the next level." He explained: "You see your opponent, you see the position of the players and that gives you a lot of data about what they do. You have a coach that sees the data and can help you with what they do, with what they need to do, and what you can do to counter them. This is based on the data." HyperMotion is available to all FIFA Ultimate Team superstars, as well as to all players at all skill levels, including those who have been waiting for more than a year to play with or against their favourite players. To use the HyperMotion technology in-game, players must enable it in the game's video options. FIFA 22 also introduces other improvements to gameplay, including a new "dribbling control" system, new shot animations, and "realistic" AI behaviour. FIFA Ultimate Team's new "dribbling control" system gives more of an impression of a player's ability to dribble the ball, and simulate the ball's spin and bounce as it moves from player to player. According to FIFA eSports Head of Product Development Tim McDougall, "dribbling" was a key feature that Ultimate Team players had been asking FIFA for. "This is a really important area for Ultimate Team, so we're excited to deliver this new update to our players," he said. A new "shot selection screen" provides players with more realistic animation and more control when selecting a shot, and also allows for image replay to give players the option of viewing selected shots for up to five minutes. FIFA 22 also features "drone camera" technology, which is designed to enhance the sensation of aerial movement. Drone camera technology creates the sensation of flying through the air with the ball at an angle of up to 90°, and is used on kicks, crosses, corners, and headed goals. The new video options also allow for players to see the focus on a selected player in real time - this has been made possible by the integration of PS Vue's
