The integration of motion capture technology allows players to move, jump and shoot more naturally, but in order to play the game in this way it is important to understand how players will react when confronted with this technology. The FIFA Licensing Committee had the challenge of planning a retrospective match between the best players in the world to help determine the effectiveness and viability of the new technology. The match was played on 1st July in Turin, Italy and the game was broadcast live on Twitch for over two weeks. Referee Alex Bonetta from Argentina, Vice-President of the FIFA Licensing Committee, explains the match. All the players and technical staff from the German Football Association (DFB) were invited to take part in the match, including FIFA Executive Vice President of Marketing and Communications, Markus Schupp, who explains the new technology and why its use is important for FIFA. Hans-Joachim Eckert, DFB President and FIFA President Gianni Infantino, take part in the match. Maverick Maestro Andre Schürle, one of the world's best footballers, explains how the technology works to his teammates, FIFA RUMBLES AND POPPING HITS AWAY The game begins with the referee, Alex Bonetta from Argentina, coming out to the centre circle and lining up his own players on both sides. The crowd is in full voice before kick-off and as the game begins, referee Bonnett reminds the spectators that this game has been recorded and broadcast live on Twitch. A buzz of anticipation fills the Turin arena as the German and Italian teams walk out onto the pitch to a round of applause from the fans and a rousing welcome from FIFA TV. Maurizio Sarri makes a speech introducing his coach Peter Stöger. Sarri will be coaching the German team, and as he makes his speech, the crowd are already chanting to get the game underway. When the whistle blows, the crowd almost explode with anticipation. The game starts and the German team play aggressively; goalkeeper Timo Horn from the German team makes a one-handed stop to his right, deflecting the ball out of play. Then there is a ripple of anticipation. The German team lead with two corners – one on the right, one on the left. Both corners are delivered perfectly, but the Italian goalkeeper Flavio Cabrini punches the ball away. A few more moments

FIFA is EA SPORTS' flagship videogame, offering everything from American football to association football (soccer) and even ice hockey, but with the true to life authenticity of over 200 player likenesses, 40 teams, official leagues and stadiums, and the strength of the ESPN broadcast networks that fans know and love. FEATURES Experience immersive, authentic football in large-scale, team-based tournaments including the newly-launched UEFA Champions League and UEFA Europa League. Revolutionize the way that players perform in and control the game. New goalkeeper controls, ball physics and animation, all-new player animations, and other improvements allow for more believable and authentic gameplay experiences and see players closer to reality with new face and body surface animations. New playmaker controls that capture how players move and position themselves within the game. Players make more precise, dynamic decisions with playmakers, fluidly move with greater precision and turn and dribble more aggressively for more goal-scoring opportunities. Improvements to every player including a new Ball Control Ability that alters how a player controls the ball in the air, better pass, dribble, and shooting animations, and new player locomotion. Innovative crowd banter and crowd reactions. Players can make their living by scoring goals, but it's not all about them. They can hear the fans chanting their name and team. This interaction between fans and the players will continue to keep people connected with the game during World Cup. New broadcast presentation feature. Watch players run and shoot on screen without the need of a new ESPN broadcast center. New player Spotlight mode. Experience the feeling of becoming a legend as a 1v1, then shoot and shoot again as a player of your creation in a last-chance shootout. Free to play: football has never been more accessible on console. Experience the emotion of playing and winning with or against friends via local and global online modes, customize your team and squad, then head to the field to play quick matches, compete in tournaments, or challenge your friends to the ultimate competitions! What's New in FIFA 22? Throughout the years, we have pushed the game to new heights to deliver the richest and most authentic sports simulation experience possible. FIFA is about more than simply playing football. We want to bring to life the historic matches, stadiums, and players to create an immersive, emotional experience. This year, we're excited to launch a new game engine, update to the
