FIFA 20 : ► More FIFA: Q: Why was a motion capture technology introduced? We wanted to add extra realism to the gameplay while creating an accurate and viable experience for the player. Most current physics engines do a great job when we are developing the game, but during testing, the visual quality can be a problem. We need to see the motions of the players to be able to make the right decisions and make the game accurate to the official rules. ► More FIFA 20: We used motion capture to make the right decisions regarding players, for example, if they are tackling from the blind side, or if they are diving or only being touched. Once we have the information from the motion capture, we are able to adapt the gameplay or develop new features. By adding more realism, we can make the game a lot more fun and appealing to players. ► More FIFA 19: Q: Is this new technology coming to FIFA 19? We created this new technology to add realism to FIFA and it is being used for FIFA 22. We are not ready to announce any details about FIFA 19, but we do know that we will be upgrading to this motion capture technology in FIFA 22. ► More FIFA 19: This motion capture technology will also be used in the next FIFA. We already have a motion capture team in the studio, and we have some interesting plans. ► More FIFA: Q: What can we expect in FIFA 22? FIFA 22 will be the most realistic FIFA simulation so far, as all the actions of the players will be recorded and can be analysed by EA Sports during the development process. We will be able to give an even more accurate feedback for players and teams when we will be able to adapt and change the rules and gameplay. At the same time, we are working on the matches where we can react even more dynamically and react to match situations in real time. ► More FIFA 21:
