Structure-activity relationship studies of 1,4-dioxan-2-ones as potential hERG blockers: focused SAR on the distal phenyl group and the amide nitrogen. The synthesis and biological evaluation of 1,4-dioxan-2-one derivatives substituted in the distal phenyl ring are described. Evaluation of the new compounds on the inhibition of hERG K(+) currents in HEK293-K(+) cells showed that the most active compound has a ClogP of 5.8, which is comparable to that of sotalol. Interestingly, in contrast to the hERG activity of 1-phenyl-1,4-dioxan-2-one, the activity of its 1,4-dioxan-2-one
