CORPORATION All Rights Reserved. THE END. The end. I wake up in a half-sleeping, half-waking state. I realize I'm somewhere in between sleeping and awake. But it's either too late to go back to sleep or too early to get up. I feel sluggish and confused. Not even fully aware of what is around me. I'm in my study. The one I had planned to build. As I finally understand the full extent of it, I collapse back onto the bed. I feel as if I've used up all of my remaining stamina and willpower. Do I have any strength to brace myself now? It can't be that. No, I can't go back to sleep. I can't stay here. I stand up. My body feels completely new. Clean, revitalized, and wrung out. My body aches and I have a strong thirst. I seem to have endured a long period of hard work. I feel somewhat dazed and confused. It's like I've forgotten how to properly use my body. But at the same time, I have a strange sense of pride that it's proof that I am more than a human. Something essential resides deep within me. I am Elden. There is no doubt. I stumble from my room. Eyes shut, I walk through the corridors. I look like a zombie. But no one sees me. The doors to the staircase are still open. There is someone else here. It's... Well, it can't be... It's him. The young boy I had chased in the Wastelands. The one who has been running after me. As I finally apprehend his presence, my mind jumps in disbelief. He is here, and here he was all along. He has been following me throughout the night. He has been looking for me in the Wastelands. It's been one year. One year. Today. It was the one-year anniversary of my

Machar joined another ceasefire along the Red Sea to mark the Muslim feast of Id al Adha and Egypt has backed the operation, noting that Sudan was a part of the country. Sudanese groups in South Kordofan and Blue Nile have voiced their support for the blockade of Sudan's oil exports, saying it would hit the Sudanese government hard. But the US has dismissed the idea of a boycott. US State Department spokesman P.J. Crowley said on Saturday that "the best option for the people of Sudan, South Sudan, and the region will be continued, consistent implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement". Women in Khartoum, the Sudanese capital, protested on Friday over the Khartoum government's fuel shortages. UN envoy Al-Bashir insists that the US-supported move to cut oil shipments to Sudan's main customers, the autonomous South Sudan, is not a peacekeeping operation, but a threat to Sudan and its people. Sudan accuses its former southern neighbour of starving its own people by withholding oil. "There will be no truce in South Kordofan or Blue Nile. There will be no ceasefire in the entire region," he said. "The south-Kordofan and Blue Nile area are in an area that... Khartoum attacks. "We are not attacking their homes but attacking their Khartoum. We are preventing them from attacking us," he added. "We are just protecting our cities," he said, referring to the north-African country's capital. "This will help us be patient in implementing the peace agreement." Government spokesman Hazim al-Mazrawi said Khartoum had ordered its forces "to be on full alert". "The government of Sudan will protect its people in the face of rebels who
