Jacobs said work will begin on the new building, which will include a strength and conditioning area, offices and player lounges, within the next few months and construction is scheduled to be completed by the start of the 2017 season. Auburn's new football operations building will be built near the locker room of the building that holds the football coaches offices. The new space will have similar amenities to what Tennessee football has in Neyland Stadium. The new building will be connected to the east side of the stadium and the coaches offices will remain in the same building. The old building will be torn down and the area will be repurposed to include a smaller weight room and an area that will provide space for the baseball team, the football team, the softball team and the other sports to use. The five existing tennis courts will be relocated to the football operations building. Jacobs said he expects an initial cost for the building to be about $20 million. The university will not be covering the cost of building the new building. The work is expected to be completed by the start of the 2017 season. Auburn's football team has had success in the new strength and conditioning areas at both Ben Hill Griffin Stadium and Jordan-Hare Stadium since the program moved into the new training facility at the start of the 2010 season. Auburn last week completed its most successful regular season in school history with a 9-3 record and the c9d1549cdd

The Lost Boys and the Lost Girls is a fantasy novel written by American authors Harry Harrison and Jack Kauman. Plot The Lost Boys are nomads and the Lost Girls are children, living a nomadic life. They learned to survive in the Lake of the Lost Boys. The creator of these nomadic boys and girls, however, is known only as the Big Shaman, who created them and their world when the world was new. (The order of creation of humans and animantions [humans with animal powers] is not known.) The Lost Children created their own myth about them, calling them the Lost Boys and Lost Girls, to make them more humanlike and kind. The Big Shaman has made an agreement with the Old Ones, the Great Ones, the Parents, the Grandparents, the Great Ones through the ages, to avoid injuring the Lost Children, and will try to keep them as noble as possible. The Lost Children will have their own dreamtime, in which the Lost Girls will be princesses, and the Lost Boys will be knights and heroines. Their first world, then, is Mount Hermon, an old and high mountain, where the Lost Girls, the Lost Boys and the Old Ones live. The world of the Lost Children, in fact, has a single mountain where the three Worlds have lived for eons, reaching back to the dawn of time. After the creation of this new world, the Big Shaman puts the Lost Children to sleep and takes them to the Land of Toys, created for them. The Land of Toys is the most wonderful place, filled with all sorts of toys for the Lost Children to play with. Unfortunately, they soon forget this beautiful place, together with the Big Shaman. The Lost Children then wake up in a faraway place, without knowing how or why they left the Land of Toys, called the Fo'c'sle. The Lost Children quickly discover that the Lost Boys are angels, and the Lost Girls are the Lost Girls. In spite of this, however, the Lost Girls have developed a glamour, in which the Lost Boys realize that the Lost Girls are in fact beautiful, and wear clothes, while the Lost Boys have to get used to the idea that the Lost Girls don't. Thus, they rush to find clothes for themselves. The Book introduces the reader to an Eternal Warrior, the Last Angel. He explains the Eternal Warrior is the Guide to the Lost Children, and is the Head of the Lost Children, and that he is needed
