[Effects of squalene on the expression of adhesion molecules in cultured alveolar type II epithelial cells]. To investigate the effect of squalene on the expression of adhesion molecules in cultured type II epithelial cells. Confluent type II epithelial cell line ATII cells were cultivated in alveolar basal medium (ABM) and treated with squalene for 24 h. The function of squalene on the expression of alpha2 beta1 integrin subunits of ATII cells was evaluated by the stimulation with or without LPS. The expression of ICAM-1 in ATII cells was detected by flow cytometry. The expression of alpha2 beta1 integrin subunits was significantly increased in ATII cells treated with or without LPS (P Comparison of two methods of stimulation of perfused isolated rat hearts. I. Relationship of left ventricular systolic pressure to left ventricular developed pressure. We compared the left ventricular (LV) systolic pressure to LV developed pressure (LVDP) relationship when hearts were stimulated by direct left atrial or coronary artery perfusion. Preparation of the heart did not alter the relative differences in sensitivity to myocardial depressant and inotropic agents. Compared with the left atrial perfusion, perfusion of the left coronary artery increased the LVDP:systolic pressure (LVSP) ratio for a given dose of isoproterenol and decreased the LVDP:LVSP ratio of ouabain. Receptor analysis revealed that one-fourth of the receptors involved in the constrictor response to norepinephrine activated in the left atrium were blocked by the perfusion of the coronary artery. We conclude that direct coronary artery perfusion of the isolated rat heart increases the sensitivity to the positive inotropic action of digitalis and norepinephrine and reduces the sensitivity to isoproterenol.Subscribe to my newsletter Every me and my mom are Every me and my mom are tied together to give a final goodbye before she had a heart attack

Q: AngularJs - Angular Subscription and WebSocket I am trying to build a web app using AngularJS (v1.4.0) and WebSocket (v0.5.0) to access data on the server. When a button is clicked it will send a message to the server and at the same time subscribe to the response. Here is the problem: If I do this it will not update my UI. If I remove the subscription and instead just do $scope.$apply then my UI updates as I expected. In the example below the button should activate (showing a "hello" div) but instead nothing happens. Please can someone explain how I should structure this code to keep it DRY and work as expected? Update: I can now see why the button is not working. The function is not returning the results from the web socket. Instead it is returning undefined. I see that this.mockedPoller = new $Polling.Mock(); I am unsure if this is configured correctly, but when I try to console.log $poller.mockIp.subscriptions it is returning undefined. All advice welcome. Here is the snippet: var app = angular.module('all_services', ['ui.bootstrap', 'ngWebSockets', 'connection.io']) .config(function($stateProvider, $urlRouterProvider, $locationProvider, $httpProvider) { $locationProvider.html5Mode(true); $stateProvider .state('hello', { template
