Topher McElhenny.President Donald Trump,
at a rally in West Virginia on Friday, said one of the reasons he wants the House to pass a government funding bill that includes just $5 billion for the border wall was that he thinks Mexico will pay for the rest of it. He added that he knows this "will be a very high percentage" of Mexico's regular revenue. "We have to have a wall, OK?" Trump said at the rally in Huntington, West Virginia. "We have a country where we have to have a wall. We have to have our border." He repeated that Mexico was going to pay for the entire project, which would run for about 700 miles, according to a recent estimate from the Department of Homeland Security. At a campaign rally in El Paso on Thursday, Trump said "this is going to cost probably a little over $10 billion, but we will build a wall and it's going to stop people very quickly." That estimate is higher than the $5 billion being offered in the House bill to fund the government for the remainder of the year.

Some of those costs do require congressional approval and could be a sticking point with lawmakers, since they could undercut the argument that Trump was already increasing border security. In a veto threat, the White House is also asking that $1.4 billion in military funding not be included in the measure. "We don't think there's a basis for providing this level of military spending without providing the full amount of the border wall that is the chief reason for that request," White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders said in a statement Thursday.
