Semiconductor devices having a power device and a control device are used in various products such as portable devices, vehicle-mounted power supplies and power steering systems. With miniaturization and higher performance of devices, the power device and the control device are integrated in the same chip or semiconductor element, so that mounting and control can be performed at low cost. One of the techniques for achieving this integration is the manufacture of a System LSI by performing design work, design verification work and manufacture of a base chip by a simple process at high speed. Such a System LSI is disclosed in, for example, Jpn. Pat. Appln. KOKAI Publication No. 2004-052318. In this System LSI, a pair of semiconductor regions having bipolar transistors with both the N-type and P-type dopants are formed in a single cell region and a pair of semiconductor regions having N-type and P-type DMOS transistors are formed in a single cell region. By the way, in the System LSI described in Jpn. Pat. Appln. KOKAI Publication No. 2004-052318, the semiconductor regions having the bipolar transistors and the semiconductor regions having the DMOS transistors are formed by a known poly-Si process in the same mask process. However, the semiconductor regions having the bipolar transistors and the semiconductor regions having the DMOS transistors are formed by the same mask process as described above, so that no sufficient

Born in the village of Thal, near Bhaderwah, he received his primary education at a local school in a small town of Oinam. He had his Santiniketan education at the famous institution of the same name. He studied Sanskrit, Philosophy and Theology with Pandit Rajputram and worked as a graduate in Philosophy and Theology. After completing his studies, he joined the Swayampatti Yogasala and later started a new branch called Sri Medura Vedanta Mysore in Mysore. Later in 1884 he joined the Sringeri Matha as a disciple of Sree Acharya. Sree Ramananda Acharya was a Sanskrit Scholar and a great knoweldge of Advaita Vedanta. Acharya Ramnanda directed him to translate Bhagavad Gita into Kashmiri, which was completed in about 1884. He visited Srinagar in 1885 for the management of the Pahari temples. He worked as a Sanskrit teacher in the School of Serampore, for a short period of time, but returned to Bengaluru in 1899. He worked as a Sanskrit teacher in the Coonoor (Kerala), Calcutta (Bengladesh) and Mysore (Karnataka). In Mysore he started the first Kashmir 6d1f23a050
