I have been using Music Player (default) to play my music files from my disk. Recently I had problems with my computer and my disk media (CD-R) seemed to be making some sort of 'spinning noise' while trying to eject. I have found out that this was caused by my Macintosh disk drive (as my windows disk drive is in my TV). When I turn the TV off, the problem goes away. Since then I cannot play any music on my PC. I have tried: I have checked that my CDR-RW disk drive is working fine. I have also tried using the different players offered by Windows (and MusicPlayer). So, is my disk drive completely bugged or is this just a design fault in Music Player (or more likely the Windows operating system). i have a problem with my sound device PC has a problem with sound after installing digital sound card and new motherboard Submitted by - on Sun, 12/15/2002 - 07:16 i have a problem with my sound device After installing my sound card and new motherboard, the sound is very quiet, the volume is very low. my sound card is x-fi i have a problem with my sound device Submitted by - on Sun c6a93da74d
